significance, said the minister, adding that competence in all these areas requires excellence in higher education. Terming the vice chancellors of universities corps commanders of higher education sector, he urged them to concentrate on turning the universities into engines of innovation.

The minister further said that the outcome of HEC Vision 2025 hinges upon seven key guidelines including academic excellence, applied research in universities, academia-industry linkages, transforming universities to serve the community for socio-economic development, making universities technology-enabled, institutional excellence, and university products i.e., skilled human resource. He affirmed that excellence in education is a must to make Pakistan an Asian tiger. "Erecting buildings in the name of universities is no achievement, the real task is to create thirst for knowledge and research," he emphasised.

He further said that various new programmes are planned to be launched including Inter-University Olympics, Global Leadership Internship, training of ERP systems to 100000 students, certificate and diploma programmes for 10000 youth who have done masters in subjects which have no relevance in the job market, and establishment of technology innovation fund.

Chairman HEC Dr Mukhtar Ahmed said that strategic priorities of the HEC Vision 2025 include sustainability and consolidation of HEC, increasing equitable access; excellence in leadership, governance and management, research, innovation and commercialisation; increased faculty with highest academic qualification, enhanced quality with curricular content for all levels of qualification offered; promoting ICT for education, and financial management and enhanced investment.

the three-tier model of tertiary education, he said the HEC aims at ensuring 40 per cent PhD faculty in universities by 2025 and reaching the less-developed areas of Pakistan.

Dr Masoom Yasinzai presented a resolution on behalf of vice chancellors and rectors of universities. "We are grateful for all the support received from the government of Pakistan particularly Prime Minister Mian Muhammad Nawaz Sharif and Federal Minister for Planning, Development and Reform, Ahsan Iqbal. The HEC Vision 2025 has chartered an exemplary and ambitious roadmap for enhanced access, qualitative improvement of curricula and vibrant world-class research model for our institutions of higher learning. We affirmatively resolve that each and every leader of the higher education sector will play its vital role in achieving the aspiration goals and targets set in HEC Vision 2025."

The conference participants were provided an opportunity to take part in special breakout sessions on human resources development in areas of national importance, quality of education at undergraduate level, universities as hubs for innovative research in national priority areas, role of universities' Office of Research, Innovation and Commercialisation (ORICS) in discovery and dissemination of useful knowledge, information and communication technologies, access to digital information and advanced programmes, standards compliant teacher education programmes, national institutions of applied technologies with specific reference to CPEC, embedding social values and ethics in higher education system, community colleges for skill development, and good governance in higher education institutions. The recommendations of these sessions will be considered for making any change in HEC Vision 2025 document.
